Heiselman Points At City's Sound Economic Status

Says Municipal Services Not Curtailed, Salaries Not Cut, City Solvent, Taxes Lowest

Schwenk Speaks

Alderman-at-Large Dwells on Well-Rounded Youth Program

Some cities during the past six years have been compelled to curtail municipal services; reduce the pay of city employees; resort to payless paydays, and boost the taxes beyond the point where the taxpayer could pay; as a result some cities are bankrupt, declared Mayor C. J. Heiselman, speaking Thursday night at the big Republican rally in Cook's Hall on Railroad avenue.

"In Kingston," said the mayor, "none of these dire things happened." He pointed out that Kingston had taken care of its needy and at the same time improved municipal services. Taxes in the last six years instead of being higher have been the lowest in 10 years.

Alderman-at-large John J. Schwenk, who also spoke at the rally, called attention to the well-rounded program of recreation for both children and adults that had been placed in operation under the Heiselman administration and outlined what steps had been taken to develop the program in Kingston. Mayor Heiselman in his address said:

As the campaign progresses, and the record of our administration's accomplishments are unfolded, I am impressed with the great interest our citizens have taken in our story of the history of the past six tempestuous years.

It seems to me that what has been done in Kingston can best be appreciated when contrasted to what has happened in some of the other cities of the country.

The major problem of every municipality during the past six years has been to adequately care for those in distress. For many of our people, these years have been filled with suffering, disappointment, despair and heart-break because of financial reverses, loss of employment and other misfortune. Morale was low. The demand for help was high.

Upon the municipalities was placed the tremendous problem of caring for those in need until they could again be self-sustaining. Work projects were initiated for hundreds of the able-bodied. The necessities of life were provided to the aged, the infirm, the sick and the unemployed.

Some cities so demoralized by the enormous problem involved, and the expense incurred, that they were compelled to curtail municipal services, reduce the pay of municipal workers, resort to payless pay days. Some were foolish enough to boost the taxes beyond the point where the taxpayer could pay the bill, and they suffered from taxpayers' strikes. Today, some cities are bankrupt.

Kingston Forged Ahead

In Kingston none of these dire things happened. In Kingston we not only properly cared for those in need. We forged ahead as well in improving and enlarging municipal services for our people.

By careful, painstaking research; by intelligent far seeing planning; by sticking to sound fundamental principles of taxation and finance; by hard and conscientious labor on the part of many faithful public servants.

In some cities, the administration of relief has been made more costly than necessary because of favoritism, influence, politics and corruption in the administration of relief.

In Kingston, relief has been administered by a board of well-known citizens of the community, and with a staff enjoying a wide reputation for its ability and integrity. Relief in this city during our administration has been dispensed on only one basis, and that is the basis of need.

In some cities, because of the demands for relief, the usual municipal services have been curtailed or reduced in order to reduce the cost of local government, resulting in inconvenience, lack of adequate protection to the public.

In Kingston this has not occurred. On the other hand, despite the high cost of welfare and relief, municipal facilities and services were enlarged and improved. Today Kingston is enjoying many improvements which do not exist prior to our administration.

Taxes Kept Low

In some cities, taxes have risen to a point where large amounts of delinquent taxes made it necessary to take title to many properties and sell them over the heads of the ejected owners.

In Kingston this has not happened. Taxes, instead of being

'Dynamite Pete' and His Dynamite

Booked as Patrick Moriarity, 49-year-old mechanic, but said to be better known as "Dynamite Pete," this man was charged at New York with possession of dynamite and burglar tools. At the right are articles police said he took from two schools which he parked in a subway station locker—21 sticks of dynamite, detonating caps, fuses, safe-cracking tools, saws, etc. Police also said the man was known in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pa., and Charleston, Mass.

German Sea Campaign to Be Factor in U. S. Crop Plan

Washington, Oct. 27 (AP)—The German naval campaign against British and French overseas commerce will be a factor, federal farm officials said today, in devising next year's crop control program.

Foreign trade experts in the agriculture department believe that if Britain and France are able to continue obtaining wheat, beef, butter, cotton, fats and other agricultural products from their dominions and other southern hemisphere sources, exports of American commodities will show little increase.

On the other hand, if efforts of Germany to interfere with the allied commerce are successful, the expert said that the United States as well as Canada may expect a substantial increase in exports of farm commodities.

FDR Gives Views On Profit, Price Says All Wish Stabilized Prosperity, Low Cost

Washington, Oct. 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt expressed the belief today that every one wanted a stabilized prosperity without increased prices.

To a request at his press conference for comment on statements by various industrialists that they preferred a steady recovery rather than a war boom, the Chief Executive said that was sort of vague.

But he added he thought that all wanted a stabilized prosperity and all wanted profits, but no one wanted prices to go up.

Public Health Nurses Hold Regional Assembly, Make Plans to Further Work

The public health nursing committee of Ulster county held an all-day regional conference at the Governor Clinton Hotel on Thursday to discuss plans for the furtherance of their work to acquaint the public with the work of the committee in assisting the district public health nurses.

As explained by Mrs. Theodor Oxholm in the afternoon session, Ulster county is divided into districts of the city of Kingston and 20 townships, three of which have their own public health officers. The other 17 have only two nurses to administer to their needs. In seven of these remaining 17 districts committees have been formed by the women of the communities to supplement the nurses and assist them, special emphasis being given to the well baby and pre-school children as it is a

Board of Health to Give Matter Consideration; Concern Would Can Fowl, Dog Food

It is understood that negotiations are pending with a large meat packing concern to lease the former Hauck brewery at Wurts and McEntee streets, and that the matter will be taken up at the November meeting of the Board of Health, when permission will be sought for a permit to operate the plant for the purpose planned.

From what could be learned the packing concern plans to kill, dress and cook chickens which are then packed in cans. It is also planned to manufacture dog food which also would be canned.

It is expected that before the November meeting of the health board the members of the board will visit the Hauck plant and make an inspection so as to be in a better position to pass upon the question when it is submitted to the board.

The packing concern, it is said, will employ a large number of men and that the methods used by the concern are modern and sanitary and that there will be no disagreeable odors at the plant.

Upper House Is Driving Toward Passage of Neutrality Bill by Nightfall

Washington, Oct. 27 (AP)—The Senate voted today to repeal the embargo against sale of arms to Europe's warring nations.

A motion by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) to reconsider an amendment which would have added two senators and two representatives to the munitions control board was rejected 50 to 43.

The amendment originally was defeated 45 to 41.

Washington, Oct. 27 (AP)—Driving toward passage of the administration's neutrality bill by nightfall, an overwhelming Senate majority turned aside today an amendment to ban armed merchant vessels and submarines of belligerent nations from United States ports.

The proposal, by Senator Clark (D-Mo.), lost out 65 to 26, the heavy preponderance of votes which supported the administration being in line with voting on other controverted amendments earlier in the week.

The day was the twentieth of Senate debate and events moved at what was, for the Senate, extraordinary speed as a result of an agreement obtained by Democratic Leader Barkley last night that no senator should speak more than 20 minutes on an amendment.

Final Passage Predicted

Administration leaders predicted final passage of the measure—with its provision for repealing the arms embargo—late in the day.

On the House side, it was learned that leaders at a long meeting last night tentatively agreed on procedure by which they hope to get final congressional action on the bill a week from tomorrow night.

The Senate version—a neutrality bill having been passed by the House last session—is slated to be called up in the House Tuesday. An effort will be made to send it to a Senate-House conference by a simple order from the rules committee, which is to meet Monday.

The House members of the conference committee probably will be instructed to insist on retention of a limited arms embargo, as provided in the original House bill, rather than agree to the Senate repeal.

Home Debate

If all goes well to that point leaders plan for the House to debate the measure and other controversial issues "not more than two days." With further Senate-House conferences it is expected by leaders that the measure will be in final form by Friday night of next week.

In the Senate galleries were crowded and most senators were on hand for what might be the last day of historic debate on the neutrality bill.

Senator Pittman (D-Nev.), an administration spokesman, opposed Clark's amendment as man-

Haver Gives Reply To DeWitt on Why He Quit Position

GOP Candidate for Office of District Attorney Says Opponent Has Had No Experience

Own Practice Hurt

Haver Says Assistant's Job Interfered Greatly With Own Law Cases

N. LeVan Haver, the Republican candidate for district attorney, speaking at the Republican rally last night in Cook's Hall on Railroad avenue, answered the speculations publicly expressed by John DeWitt, the Democratic candidate for the office, as to why he had resigned as assistant district attorney, and charged that Mr. DeWitt, as far as the records show, has never tried a criminal case in his life.

"Certainly, since he (DeWitt) has been in Kingston as a practicing attorney he has not had any extensive experience," said Mr. Haver, who declared that the voters were entitled to know whether the man they hired for district attorney this year was an experienced man or not.

Referring to the speculations made by Mr. DeWitt in his campaign for office this fall, Mr. Haver said that one of DeWitt's speculations was "one of the cheapest and most unfair pieces of political chicanery that the voters of this county have had handed to them in some time."

Mr. Haver, who was one of the principal speakers at the rally, said:

To Settle the Dust

As the late Will Rogers used to say "I see by the papers" that my opponent, Mr. DeWitt, is speculating and the dust that is arising from these so-called "dusty files" is blinding the real issues. I propose at this time to settle the dust once and for all.

It has always been my understanding of a political campaign that a candidate should endeavor to convince the voters that he is qualified from a standpoint of ability, experience, training and background for the office which he seeks. Voters are always interested in knowing the capabilities and qualifications of candidates, and, personally, I feel that voters are entitled to know these facts and that the present campaign for district attorney in this county is no exception.

However, the Democratic candidate seems to have other ideas. He does not seem to feel that the voters would be at all interested in knowing anything about him or his qualifications. So far as I have been able to ascertain, he has not endeavored to inform the voters as to the nature or extent of his experience in criminal law, either in the defense or prosecution. Certainly, since he has been in Kingston as a practicing attorney he has not had any extensive experience in this line, and up to the present time he has not informed the public as to any experience he might have had in criminal law prior to his return to Kingston. He has steadfastly disregarded the prime and sole purpose of a political campaign.

DeWitt Has Failed

Now what are the duties of a district attorney? The responsibility is the prosecution of crime within the county, and in order to successfully prosecute crime, it is necessary that a district attorney have some experience in the practice of criminal law. Mr. DeWitt has failed to tell the voters of this city and county of his experience in this field. I have endeavored to call to the attention of the voters the fact that I have had a long experience not only as assistant under the present district attorney, but also in a minor capacity under Frederick G. Traver during his last term as district attorney. During the six years that I was assistant district attorney, I appeared before 23 grand juries which handled on an average of 30 cases each, and I can truthfully state that during that period of time I personally presented from four to five hundred cases before these various grand juries.

Haver's Experience

In addition to this, I assisted the district attorney in the trial of every criminal case that was tried during that period of six years, including the first degree murder cases, and a number of other cases of importance.

I feel that I know what the job is about and that the people of Ulster county would prefer to hire a man who has had experience and training.

Now, as to Mr. DeWitt's speculations. His first speculation was that I resigned to defend Charles Ford, who was charged with murder in the first degree. His second speculation was one of the cheapest and most unfair pieces of political chicanery that the voters

'Flint' Flew Danish Flag

Scottish Radio Operator Says German Prize Crew Also Repainted Name of Ship to Alf, Sailed Freighters Through Dangerous Waters

Bergen, Norway, Oct. 27 (AP)—James McConnochie, radio operator of the American freighter City of Flint, declared today the ship's German prize crew took her through ice-strewn waters with explosives planted in the engine room while they flew the Danish flag and repainted the ship's name to "Alf."

McConnochie, a Scot, gave the German captors the slip when they stopped at Tromsø, Norway, to unload survivors of the British ship Stonegate, sunk by the raider that took the Flint captive.

Mixing with the British sailors, he managed to get ashore undetected and came to Bergen with them.

His story to the Bergen newspaper Arbeiderbladet after his arrival here said the City of Flint sighted a foreign warship October 9 which at first was assumed to be British or French but proved to be the German pocket battleship Deutschland.

The raider halted the freighter, placed the survivors of the torpedoed British ship aboard and then proceeded to check the cargo, finding "a considerable quantity of oil."

Declaring this was serious, the German commander said he would not sink the ship, McConnochie related, but placed 18 Germans on board to take possession.

The Scottish radio operator, who had been the first man to pick up the distress signals from the British liner Athenia, said that the City of Flint thereupon began a slow, "unpleasant" trip northward through "terrible cold" seas.

En route, he continued, the German crewmen planted a heavy

British Discover About 60 Bodies In Shattered Sub

Submersible Is Washed on Goodwin Sands Off Kentish Coast at 5-Mile Distance

Dover, England, Oct. 27 (AP)—Between 50 and 60 bodies were reported today to have been found by British divers exploring a shattered German submarine washed up yesterday on the Goodwin Sands.

The Goodwin sands are more than five miles out from the Kent coast, forming a natural breakwater for the Dover roadstead. Heavy firing was heard off the coast on Wednesday.

One theory was that the submarine was sunk either by depth charges or aerial bombs and drifted aground.

A German submarine was stuck on the sands after becoming entangled in nets in 1917. Half of the crew was saved.

Divers worked from a salvage vessel beside the submarine. Part of the conning tower and periscope were visible from shore with the aid of glasses.

The submarine was lying on the sandbank near the wrecks of the Italian steamer Val Salice and the American steamer Siberia, lost on the same day in 1917 during a storm.

Goodwin Sands are the storm-tossed wreckage of a once-fertile island.

Known as Lomea, the isle was the home of Earl Godwin or Godwine in the eleventh century, when England was a Saxon land.

William the Conqueror confiscated the estate and gave it to the Abbey of St. Augustine at Canterbury.

Tradition holds that funds for maintaining seawalls of the island were diverted by the abbey to build the steeple of Tenterden Church, in the Kentish town of that name.

As a result, the island was swept away by a storm in 1099, and ever since, its treacherous sands have been the bane of mariners.

An old maxim of the countryside runs: "Tenterden steeple was the cause of Goodwin sands."

Pope in His First Encyclical Blames 'Denial of God' for Plunge Into War

Castel Gandolfo, Oct. 27 (AP)—Pope Pius XII, in the first encyclical of his reign, today blamed "the denial of God" for leading the world to war and pleaded for peace.

The Pope appealed for peace treaties at the end of this war which would avoid the "sacrifices and sufferings" which failed to bring lasting peace in the past.

The war, he said, would fail to impose a decisive change in conditions—unless followed by treaties of peace "animated by justice and equity toward all."

He warned "there is danger lest settlements be born in such conditions" as "sacrifices and sufferings."

At the same time, he said, respect for treaties was indispensable to peace.

The pontiff criticized dictator-

James A. Rapp, driver of the delivery truck of the Great Bull Markets, marvelously escaped with but slight injury this noon when the truck he was operating turned over three times after it was in collision with a pickup truck owned by John H. The two trucks collided at the intersection of Main street and Washington avenue. Both machines were damaged.

Largest Grant Is $21,000 to Kortrights; Fees, Expenses $9,226

Awards representing a total of $82,600 with an additional $9,226 for fees, expenses and disbursements, were listed in the first report of Condemnation Commissioners Mark W. MacLay, Ross K. The report dispenses of several claims among them several large awards made to property owners whose property is being taken by the City of New York for water works purposes.

M. Michel Dobris was appointed to the commission in place of James J. Gorman, who resigned.

In the Cassie G. Porter claim, parcel 1336, a parcel containing 39,651 acres on route 35, the award is $6,800, together with interest. ### Roosevelt Admits Little Knowledge Of Ship's Seizure

Berlin Advances to Effect Craft Is Being Sailed Along Norway's Coast by Prize Crew

Battle in Making

French Observers Estimate Million and Half Nazis on West Front

(By The Associated Press)

President Roosevelt said today he lacked sufficient information for comment on the seizure of the American steamer City of Flint by Germany.

Asked why Laurence A. Steinhardt, American ambassador to Moscow, had been unable to find out when, where and to whom the vessel had been released, the chief executive replied it was a long way from Moscow, the Soviet capital, to Murmansk, where the freighter was taken by the Germans.

Official advices received at Berlin tonight said the United States steamer City of Flint was being sailed from Murmansk to Germany under command of a prize crew from the German pocket battleship Deutschland.

The freighter was reported somewhere along the Norwegian coast, heading slowly into the British area.

The vessel, seized as a contraband ship and taken to the Russian port of Murmansk, above the Arctic circle, was released last night by Soviet Russia.

Prize Court to Decide

Advices reaching Berlin said the Germans lost no time in lifting anchor for Hamburg where a prize court was planned to decide on the fate of the ship and her cargo.

United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt finally succeeded late today in gaining an interview with a Russian foreign office official in his quest for information on the American vessel City of Flint, after earlier attempts to get an appointment had failed.

The ambassador went to see Vladimir P. Potemkin, vice-commissioner of foreign affairs, shortly before 6 p. m. (10 a. m. E. S. T.). There was no immediate announcement of the result of the interview.

Although Soviet officials had assured Steinhardt they would give him full information concerning the vessel which was taken to the Russian port of Murmansk under command of a German prize crew and later released, he had been unable to learn any more than what was in the Soviet press.

That was simply a brief report that the City of Flint had been freed from the remote port.

Drive In Making

French military observers estimated 1,500,000 Nazi troops were in "jump-off spots" along the western front.

The troop concentrations indicated the largest battle of the war was in the making, they said. In Britain, neutral sources were inclined to agree with that view. They pointed to a ban on coast-to-coast telephone calls on the private use of telephones and telegraph services to foreign countries without permit.

A similar ban was imposed the day Nazi troops smashed their way into Poland.

British Enlistments

Britain opened enlistments in the military service to volunteers for the first time since the war began, including men between 22 and 35 in Great Britain and between 20 and 35 years of age in northern Ireland.

At Dover, the British admiralty reported the bodies of from 50 to 60 sailors had been found in a wrecked German submarine washed ashore on the Goodwin Sands five miles off the Kentish coast. Officials theorized the submarine had been sunk by depth bombs.

Finland still mullied over Russian demands upon her after hearing Foreign Minister Elyas Erkkö declared "Finland must decide her own future."

In India, the Nationalistic Congress Ministry of Madras added to Britain's troubles by resigning in protest against the British Indian policy. Britain had indicated she would not discuss dominion status for India until after the war.

SCHWENK'S RECORD

Alderman-at-Large John J. Schwenk is one of the outstanding public officials of Kingston, and as president of the Common Council he has worked untiringly for the best interests of the city. He has cooperated with Mayor Heiselman and other city officials in the conduct of city affairs. That the sound business principles as applied to municipal government has proven successful is shown by the improved municipal service at less cost, and the lowest tax rates in years.

Alderman-at-Large Schwenk is seeking reelection on the record he has made during his term of office as head of the city's legislative branch of government. That record stands without criticism. He is a close student of municipal affairs, and his experience as acting mayor during those times when Mayor Heiselman was unavoidably absent gave him first hand knowledge of city affairs.

President Schwenk has been especially interested in the Heiselman administration's youth program and has devoted and is devoting considerable of his time to that project. He is without doubt the only city official in the country who devotes practically his entire salary as alderman-at-large in carrying on boys' work in Kingston. He is the sponsor of the Schwenk Boys' Club, an organization that is doing a worthwhile job with boys in the city.

President Schwenk's record, both as a private citizen and public official, stands unchallenged. There is no question but that he will be returned to office by an even larger majority than he received two years ago.

AUTOS AND MARKETS

As many people may have noticed, this is a good season for automobiles. People in the trade are talking of a 5,000,000 car year, which would mean a considerable gain over the 3,600,000 sales of 1939 models. It would be better than a normal year, as reckoned by the business statisticians.

Five million are an awful lot of cars, far more than the rest of the world together could make or use in normal times. And today the foreign market for new cars is poorer than usual, except for military purposes. From present indications, too, it will be many years before civilians in Europe will be buying automobiles again, even to the limited extent of recent years. As for Asia, the auto has never got a start there.

Our own country remains the great automobile market. After that, Latin-America. There is where our main expansion field seems to be now, as roads improve and something like Pan-American prosperity develops.

DESIRABLE HIGHWAY

The proposed Mississippi Scenic Highway appeals to the imagination. It would start at Lake Itasca, Minn., which is the source of the Mississippi River, and follow the Father of Waters to the Gulf of Mexico. The plans call for a modern road 2,000 miles long, bordered by a fine parkway. States along the route would be expected to contribute right-of-way and to share in construction and maintenance expenses. The total is estimated at $500,000,000.

Such a highway would have scenic and historic charm, in addition to its usefulness. It would link busy cities, a number of state parks and varied rural regions and climates. More and more Americans have the cars to traverse such routes and the impulse to explore and see America at first hand.

THE CROCHETING SHOVELER

The crochet and embroidery champion of Utah, recently chosen at the State Fair, is a man whose bread-winning job is that of "mucker" at the Midvale smelter. He shovels ore during working hours and crochets and does fine needlework as a hobby in his leisure time.

His crocheted luncheon set and embroidered dollies won firsts in three divisions at the fair, and three firsts mean the championship.

This male needleworker feels no embarrassment at the title he has won. "I'm proud of the work I do in the fairer sex's field," he says. Perhaps he likes to beat the ladies at their own game, or perhaps he finds skill and artistic ability as interesting to develop in this line as they would be in any other handcraft. Some women should come forward now to win a championship title as a cabinet-maker.

"Romance is gone," says Fritz Kreisler; "the young no longer have time for such foolishness." Evidently he doesn't know the young people we know.

This is not an "expanding" but a "contracting" war, says Walter Lippmann. But still a pretty big contract.

The general impression now is that everybody's going to lose this war and nobody's going to win anything but medals.

Isn't it about time now for the Russian Bear to hole up for the winter?

SHRINKING SOLUTIONS IN NOSE

It is very gratifying to note that the number of operations in the nose and its adjoining sinuses is becoming fewer every year. In former days, any little blockage of the nose by a bent septum (partition between nostrils) or by an enlarged turbinate bone was "corrected" by operation. Operations often meant loss of the lining membrane of the nose with total or partial loss of smell and the loss of the resisting power of the nose in warding off infections also.

Today, the use of salt and water or epinephrine or ephedrine solutions, by shrinking the lining membrane of the nose, give the necessary relief in a great many cases. This shrinking of the lining or mucous membrane also helps the mucous in the sinuses to drain off properly.

Nose and throat specialists state that if the air can get into the sinuses, thus "ventilating" them, there would be no accumulation of mucus or pus in the sinuses and thereby many cases of catarrh and deafness would be prevented. The drugs generally used to shrink the mucous membrane are epinephrine (adrenalin) and ephedrine the Chinese drug.

In order to get the shrinking solution into the upper and lower halves of the sinuses, the method now coming into general use is to "lower" the head either well forward or to either side. Dr. Sidney N. Parkinson, Oakland, California, in the Journal of the American Medical Association recommends that the patient lie on his side with the head bent downward exactly sideways, weight being on shoulder.

Some shrinkage is first obtained by the use of ephedrine solution in an atomizer. This may require 5 to 10 minutes. The patient is then placed in the sideways, head-down position and solution of ephedrine is placed in both nostrils. After 3 to 5 minutes, the head is turned face downward to permit the solution and any mucus to come away from the nostrils.

In addition to reaching the entire surface of the nose and sinuses, this method prevents the solution itself and any mucus or pus from going into the lungs or stomach.

Even when used at home, salt, epinephrine or ephedrine solutions by this simple method enable all the lining membranes to be reached and should give excellent results. The spraying or placing of "drops" up into the nose fails to reach much of this lining membrane.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

AMERICA'S FRONTIER OF 1940

Babson Says Philippines Ideal for Homesteading

Babson Park, Mass., Oct. 27—Ever since I visited the Philippine Islands last month, I have been wondering why the United States government sent several hundred "unemployed" farming families to Alaska instead of the Philippines. I confess that I am not an authority on the islands, having stayed there only four days. Certain visionaries, however, have not spent even four minutes in this locality.

I have, for those interested in 1940 "pioneering," let me say something now about the Philippines. It is a subject to which 99 per cent of Americans have given too little thought—of this I am firmly convinced.

From purely a trade point-of-view, the Philippines are not too important to the United States. Their foreign trade is less than 2 per cent of the United States total. I am told that Java could land sugar in the United States after payment of duty for about what it now costs the Philippines to produce it. Sugar, however, is not the only important product of the islands although it is the one that people in the United States hear most about.

COPRA, HEMP NEEDED HERE

Copra and other products of the coconut are very important. From copra comes the oil which is used in fine soaps, margerines, and cooking oils. The dairy and cottonseed interests of the states object, however, to importing this copra duty free. Rice is another important Philippine product, although not enough is raised to satisfy the needs of the Islands. Hemp is the outstanding raw material which the people of the United States gladly welcome free of duty. The Philippine Islands produce the finest hemp in the world.

The production of tobacco and the manufacture of cigars is on the increase. So are other industries. Most of these compete to some extent with business in the States. Even Hollywood is jealous because the Philippines are now coming up among countries making moving pictures. On the other hand, the islands are the big purchasers of many of America's products. At a public discussion regarding the complete independence of the Philippines, I stated that the islands must not expect "both to have their cake and eat it, too." That is, they must choose either a territorial status and free trade with the United States or independence and the payment of the same duties which other foreign nations pay.

Islands Vital to Our Shipping

The same statement applies to the people of the United States. We cannot expect the Philippines to buy our machinery, automobiles, radios, textiles, and a thousand other of our manufactured products unless we are willing to buy their sugar, copra, tobacco, hemp, and other raw materials. Since the war, the Philippines have become an even better customer of the United States. This is a very important fact to remember. If we wish to prevent Japan from taking our shipping business away from us, American ships must have goods to haul. I go further and say that without a growing trade between the Philippines and America, we cannot keep our merchant marine on the Pacific. Hence, the islands are "both to have our cake and eat it, too."

As the situation now stands, we have promised the Philippines complete independence in 1946. Up until the time of Japan's ruthless attack upon China, the islands were very happy over the idea. Since then, however, many thoughtful Filipinos have been wondering. They are now asking themselves two questions: (1) Will the Japanese try to take the islands after 1946; and (2) Could the Philippines protect themselves if Japan should try to take them?

Frankly, there seems little point in discussing these questions today. Great world events will take place between now and 1946.

No Fear of Japanese

Yet, I do not now see how, without considerable help from us through tariff concessions and otherwise, our "little brown brothers" can raise the money necessary for military protection against Japanese invasion. Today, however, the Philippines have no fear on this score. They are both brave and proud. They have heard so much all their lives about the advantages of full independence, that they are determined to try it. However, conditions in the Orient during the next ten years may work to the disadvantage of the Philippines.

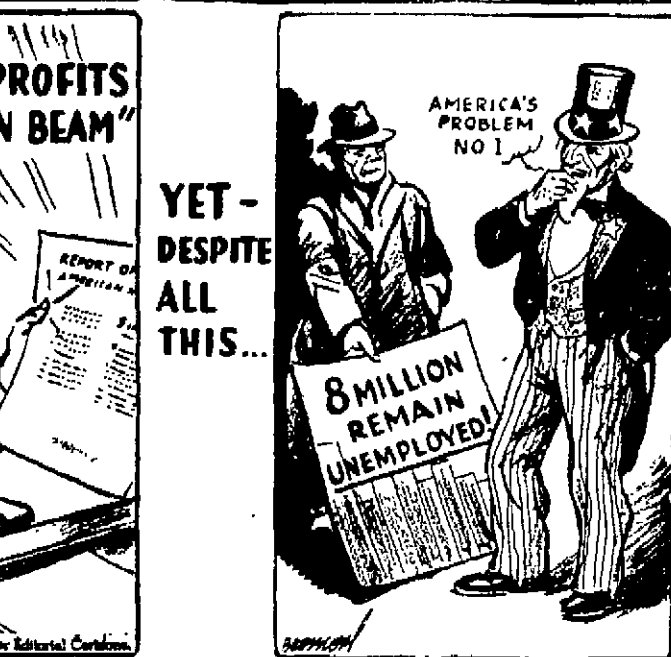

Meanwhile, the Philippines will continue as the frontier of America. The chief argument of our 8,000,000 unemployed is that virgin fertile land no longer exists in the United States for them; that the good lands of the west have been fully settled; and hence "relief" must be considered a fixed and permanent expense. Because of these arguments some "pioneer" families were trucked off to Alaska several years ago. But the Philippines are a far better bet for such homesteading. They have fertile soil, sufficient rains, and every agricultural advantage. No one starves.

Homestead the Islands

Moreover, I believe the cost of living there is lower than in any other part of the civilized world offering similar opportunities. I certainly would like to see the United States buy land in the islands and open it up to Alaskan farmers on a homesteading basis. The Philippines have millions of acres of wonderfully fertile and healthy land and a friendly and progressive people. Much of our United States is mere sandhills compared with what the Philippines can offer.

The only hope for 8,000,000 of our unemployed is a return to Alaska. The Philippine Islands have millions of acres of good land which need farmers. I do not mean one-crop farmers, but those willing to raise all they consume except their shirts and shoes. I do not know whether or not this is practical; but it surely should be thoroughly tried out before 1946. The answer to such an experiment should largely determine the decision as to the future relationship between the United States and these rich distant islands.

Secretary Wallace's Third Term Suggestion May Be a Distinct Disservice to the President

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Oct. 27.—What Secretary Wallace intended as a compliment to his chief may turn out to be a distinct disservice to the President.

For, if there ever is a time when cabinet officers should refrain from discussing politics—and third term politics at that—it is during the perilous moments of the neutrality debate.

The secretary of agriculture certainly has not been reading the newspapers lately or he would have learned that the principal opposition to the repeal of the embargo is derived from a deep-seated distrust on the part of Republicans which accuses Mr. Roosevelt of being so eager to have a third term as to be willing to drag America into the war to fulfill his ambitions. Only a few weeks ago, former Governor Landon voiced publicly the hope that Mr. Roosevelt would renounce now all third term aspirations as one way to bring national unity in the face of the European crisis.

It is true that Mr. Wallace's utterances do not necessarily reflect the President's view, but at a time when the administration would wish to allay suspicion, the interview given by the secretary of agriculture will be taken by partisan Republicans as confirmation of their fears of political capitalization of the present war by Mr. Roosevelt despite his request that politics be adjourned.

For reasons of his own, Mr. Roosevelt has chosen to remain silent on the third term question. Whether he intends to run or to decline to run is something he alone will decide and there has been no sign that he will consent to be "smoked out" ahead of the spring of 1940, when presumably he has intended all along to make his position clear.

Unfortunately for Mr. Roosevelt—whether or not he intends to run—he cannot in advance take anybody into his confidence, not even his cabinet officers. So far as it is known, he has never revealed his desires to anybody—possibly not even to the members of his own household. It is, therefore, apparent now more than ever that office-holders who talk third term do so on their own responsibility and initiative. For, if there was any conclusion between the White House and the third term boomers, it certainly would have functioned better than to permit the secretary of agriculture to be issuing interviews about the third term to the press just as the neutrality debate reaches its critical stages.

But the Wallace episode will serve a useful purpose in that it will enable the country to dismiss all talk of the third term, emanating hereafter from cabinet officers and political henchmen, as merely wishful thinking on the part of a political machine. The incident will also bring into the open the question of whether any man is truly essential to the presidency. Woodrow Wilson, in his speech accepting the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1912, said there was no "indispensable" man in America and he was by that remark singling out for criticism Theodore Roosevelt, who was seeking a third term even though four years had elapsed since the ending of his second term.

Many Democrats will no doubt agree with Secretary Wallace that President Roosevelt has a background of information and training valuable to leadership of America in war-time. But the real issue will be whether only one man in the Democratic party is so fitted, or whether the nation will be setting by contrast an example to the one-man governments of the world of a country which has an abundance of men of poise, of judgment, of capacity and of patriotism who can steer a democracy through the shoals of war-time crises.

This correspondent has believed that Mr. Roosevelt does not wish to run and will so announce in due time, but that the Democratic party convention may decide in 1940 to draft him anyway—a circumstance which Chairman Hamilton of the Republican national committee says publicly he would welcome because he thinks the nation would defeat a third term candidate in 1940.

Republican Candidates

HENRY FOX

A veteran in service of his country, is Henry Fox, who has been named by the Republicans of the Fifth ward as their standard bearer for the office of alderman at the coming election.

Mr. Fox's civic record includes three terms as a member of the city's governing board—one term under the late Mayor Block and two terms under Mayor Edgar J. Dempsey. His record as a member of the board of aldermen indicates that he was consistently a friend of the laboring man, active in every move that would raise his standard of living and contribute to his welfare and happiness. In addition he worked for betterment of conditions generally not only in his ward but in the city as a whole.

A native of Kingston and most of his life a resident of the Fifth ward, he knows its people and its needs and can be depended upon to work for their best interests.

Mr. Fox's military record includes service with the 16th Regular U. S. Infantry and with Battery B of the 2nd U. S. Artillery. As a veteran of the Spanish-American War he spent nearly three years in the Philippines. He was one of the mounted scouts that "flying bodyguard" in the campaign against Aguinaldo and well remembers the general only three days before the latter met his death. It was during the Philippine campaign that he contracted an ailment from which he has suffered more or less ever since.

In his earlier days Mr. Fox was a devotee of the great American game of baseball and was a member of the Eagles, playing third base for its team which won victories in its day. Incidentally, Bob Brodhead, outstanding pitcher for the old Eagles, also was among those who saw service in the Philippines at the same time as did Mr. Fox.

Fraternally, Mr. Fox is a member of Wilwycik Tribe of Red Men and at one time served as sashem of the Wawarsing Tribe of that order.

For many years Mr. Fox was employed in the Terry and Hutton brickyards, but for several years past has served as a watchman for the Cornell Steamboat Co.

In electing Mr. Fox to represent them in the board of aldermen the voters of the Fifth ward may feel that they have selected a man

Health Nurses Hold Conference

Shandaken, town of Shawangunk and town of Ulster were present as well as representatives of the state department of public health and the two public health nurses, Miss Anna C. Cassidy and Miss Mildred M. Ploss.

The morning session consisted of round table groups for officers of the committees. The presidents met with Mrs. Oxholm and discussed plans for the county committee coming year with reference to individual town activities. The discussion of the treasurers of the committees was on ways and means of raising money and was led by Mrs. John Miller. The secretaries and publicity committee discussed the work on publicity and parliamentary law under the leadership of Mrs. George Ross. A general discussion was held on the work of the sub-committee with Mrs. Harry Eppes, Mrs. Harold Story and Mrs. Ferris Turner as leaders. They discussed the nurses' aid, transportation and supplies problems.

At noon Louis R. Netter, managing editor of The Freeman, and Mrs. Marion Bullard, Woodstock correspondent of the Ulster County News, spoke on "How to Write Newspaper Publicity," following which the noon session convened for luncheon.

The afternoon session was presided over by Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham, district health officer, New York state department of health, who introduced the speakers, the first of whom was Dr. Elizabeth M. Gardiner, director of the division of maternity, infancy and child hygiene of the New York state department of health, who spoke on "The Public Health Movement."

She defined public health as "the art and science of preventing disease, prolonging life and preserving mental and physical health by organized community effort." The public health movement from ancient times to the present day with a forecast for the future was reviewed by Dr. Gardiner.

That the ancient had communal health has been made apparent by the findings of the archeologists who report evidences of isolation, use of water and a crude form of sterilization. Sanitation probably evolved because uncleanliness caused discomfort. The crusades in their travels also contributed to public health customs.

The middle era of public health included many things such as antiseptics, control of epidemics, the development of bacteriology, the realization of needs for organization in public health leading to control programs, and the activity of bacteriology and bio-chemistry.

In the present trend of public health work the laboratories and the hands of trained, skilled scientists and anything that affects a great number of people comes under the jurisdiction of the health department.

As to her prophecy, Dr. Gardiner said that the health officer will be a centralized authority and there will be an increase in the need of public health nurses for keeping the people and not only preventing and curing disease.

She urged her audience to study the experiments of other countries and to make up their minds as to what will be the most equitable for the community, stressing the fact that the community should take an active interest and be prepared for new developments.

Miss Jean Henry, assistant director of the division of public health nursing of the state health department, in enumerating the responsibilities of the community in public health dealt with the immediate present. She said that the citizens' first responsibility is to know what is being spent for health and what is being given in return and secondly to know the health needs in their communities and how they may be met. She asked the challenging question, "Is there much point in having excellent roads and beautiful buildings and schools for education if people aren't healthy to enjoy them?" in showing the relation between money spent in public works, education and public health.

Miss Henry also gave startling statistics of Ulster county as against upstate communities with the Ulster county rates amazingly high.

"It is generally recognized," continued Miss Henry, "that the public health nurse is the best qualified by virtue of her training and position to aid in education in the home. Her results are limited, however, by the limited number of nurses in the community."

Mayor Heiselman also attended the meeting to express the gratitude of the city administration to all agencies helping the officials in the work toward public health and spoke of the progress being made in the city of Kingston.

Mrs. Theodor Oxholm in her review of the work of the public health nursing committee of Ulster county, president of the town of Esopus committee, said that of the seven committees the oldest is two years old and the youngest one week old, showing that the work is new to Ulster county. This of course is exclusive of the Highland committee which is 17 years organized and doing splendid work in aiding the nurse.

Some of the activities of the committees have been to form clinics, find clinic quarters, equip the clinics and to assist the public health nurse in the clinic. They have also provided transportation for families to and from clinics in the townships and in Kingston and they have made obstetrical bundles which contain everything needed for home deliveries. Mrs. Oxholm also pointed out that this public health service is for the people themselves with no thought of charity and that many are taking advantage of it. It is kept quite impersonal and aid is given only when the nurse asks for it as it is only through the nurse's orders that the committees function.

In the near future the committees hope to have loan closets of sick room supplies. In closing Mrs. Oxholm urged the committees to make the work of the public health nurses and the nursing committees, which give so much necessary aid when one nurse has a large territory to cover, to become established organizations in Ulster county, which in turn will help to reduce the high figures reported by Miss Henry.

Chapter 18
Just Pebbles

MICHAEL had put the box on the desk, and they had all four regarded it with breathless interest, manifested in four various ways. The District Attorney puffed furiously at his pipe. Michael pulled at his ear abstractedly. Bunny frowned to himself and Tuck pushed the hair behind her left ear, and wriggled ecstatically.

"A can opener?" she suggested after a brief silence.

"A hammer and chisel," Michael decided, and dashed to the basement, to return in a moment with the tools. He inserted the edge of the chisel at the juncture of the hump and the box, and several sharp blows broke the hump free. He laid down the tools and put his hand out toward the box.

Tuck held her breath.

He lifted the lid. There was an odor of dust, and a breathless moment, and then four audible exhalations.

"Well, I'll be damned," said Michael. "There was no hump, but only a thin sheaf of papers stuffed hastily, I seemed, into the box. He lifted them out, and laid them on the table, with only a hasty glance to see that they were covered with writing. Below them, covering the bottom of the box, was a solid layer of small, round pellets of paper.

"They're it's..." Tuck muttered to herself.

Michael lifted one out. He unfolded the paper slowly, carefully, with the thing lying in the palm of his hand. He laughed. He held it out for them to see.

It was nothing more than a small, round, common black pebble.

"Well, I'll be..." he began.

"You said that before," Tuck reminded him crisply. "Open the rest quick, Michael! There were only twelve diamonds away... and there are dozens of those parcels."

Michael obeyed. He pushed the box to one side, and laid the pellets one by one on the desk, unfolding the paper carefully.

"I don't think..." it seems as if he breathed as he opened them.

"It isn't," Bunny said disappointedly, as he came to the end. There was nothing remotely resembling a diamond lying there before them, only thirty round black pebbles on their opened wrappings of scraps of paper. The District Attorney picked one up, and scratched it thoughtfully with his thumb-nail. Michael caught his meaning, and did it to several.

"Rocks," he said finally. "We've been bunked, ladies and gentlemen."

"Bunked?" Tuck repeated, wide-eyed.

The District Attorney had lifted the papers from the desk, and was reading them. He made no comments. His face grew more and more furrowed. He laid down his pipe. He read every paper before he looked up to find them regarding him intently. There was a red spot in each of his cheeks.

"Well?" Michael asked.

There was an expression of the utmost disgust on John Forrester's face. "There's something for you to work on, Michael," he told his son. "I'll not be fit for ladies' ears."

Love Letters

TUCK seized the papers from the desk where he had dropped them. "Come on, Bunny," she said, "this seems to have its possibilities."

"My dear girl," her father-in-law said helplessly. "There's—it's indecent."

"Piffle, Father Forrester," she said absently. "Nothing can hurt me."

Michael twisted his mouth down at his father, and went unashamedly to read over her shoulder.

They were letters. As Michael put it later, they were warm friendly, affectionate letters, seemingly from a lady to a gentleman.

"Beloved," the first one began, and went on, "beloved, I shall be waiting for you tonight as ever. Come the moment you can get away. Life is so short that I don't waste one precious moment of these wonderful hours together. Nothing matters to me now but the hours we spend in each other's arms."

"Dear, dear," Michael commented. "I don't suppose the lady ever missed a day of meals or she wouldn't talk like that."

"Michael," Tuck said severely, "your speech denotes a terrible cynicism."

"Never mind, you two," Bunny said quickly. "read the next one, Tuck."

Tuck turned the page. "It sounds just like the last one," she murmured disappointedly.

"What do you expect, my darling?" Michael said lightly. "Moves? There isn't so much variety in the real thing, I assure you."

She regarded him with stony disapproval. He did not look at her. His eyes were fixed on the next letter.

"There's an interesting phrase," he pointed out. "There... where she says—'What does it matter if we are discovered? There is always a way out; for us, the beginning of life at last, had we only the courage to take that way out.'"

The District Attorney snorted. "So," Michael went on, "they took the way out."

"Who did, Michael?"

"Well, the lady and the tiger. Otherwise, the professor."

"What lady?"

"That's it. Too bad we haven't got one of those handwriting experts who could describe her down to the crook in her little finger." He picked up the paper where they lay in Bunny's quiet hand, and looked them over closely, anxiously.

"What are you looking for, Michael?"

"I thought perhaps one of them would have a golden hair stuck to the back, or a bit of tweed from the lady's skirt. Then, we would have something to work on."

"Don't be an ass, Michael," his father said bitterly.

Michael sighed. "I have never been properly appreciated," he said disconsolately. "My parent and my... repudiate me. I am the picture of injured and misunderstood innocence."

"I don't think that picture was very well developed," Bunny said. "Better throw it away, Michael, and let's get down to earth. What does this mean?"

"Doesn't it mean we've cherished the femme? Only... who is she? What more can we find from these sweet and beautiful protestations of love, save that there exists somewhere a fond and unrequitable passion, not a rabidly between the Professor and a lady as yet unknown. She loved him, and they left for parts unknown together. They have taken the way out, evidently to Chicago."

"Bond And Newspaper

"HAVE it your own way," Bunny said shortly. "Don't talk sense if you don't want to."

Michael eyed her in surprise. "Bunny, such a temper!" He folded the letters together and thrust them into his pocket. "You know very well there's nothing to talk sense about. We find a little box full of rocks, and letters, and I can't deduce anything from them. Can you? So what's the use conjecturing things about things? I shall have a gentleman who understands these little matters go over the letters very, very carefully, with of course a warning to him first that he may scorch his fingers rather badly. And in the meantime, Tuck interrupted him ruthlessly. "I am going to find out what these pebbles mean. They must mean something."

The District Attorney sat down heavily in the big red leather chair beside the fire, crossed his knees and leaned back. "I am confused," he said after a moment. "Utterly bewildered."

"Blown about like a leaf in the wind," said the irrepressible Michael, "facing now this way, now that. Never getting nowhere."

"Do be quiet!" said Tuck rudely.

She was spreading the small papers out on the desk and regarding each one intently on both sides, before she laid it down. Bunny got up and went over to her. She lifted a paper and scrutinized it carefully.

"I don't see anything on it," she said doubtfully.

"I don't either. I thought I had found a pencil mark on one of them, a minute ago, but perhaps I was mistaken. It was very faint."

Michael moved nonchalantly across the room to stand beside her. "A pencil mark?"

"Not writing. Just a sort of mark."

"Where?"

She picked up one of the little papers and held it out. "There, just at the edge," she pointed. "Just a long sort of mark."

"What about invisible ink?" said Bunny suddenly as Michael looked.

"We can find out, of course. I don't know whether this is a pencil mark or just a mark from an old crease in the paper, Tuck."

"It's a pencil mark. Here's another."

"Let me see," Bunny demanded. "I think I've found one too."

"Put all the ones with decided pencil marks on them out to the side, shall we?" Michael asked.

But there weren't very many; more than five or six with certain marks and three with doubtful ones. However, the sorting and the close scrutiny led them one step onward.

"It seems to me," said Bunny slowly, "that there are two kinds of paper here... a sort of newspaper print one and a letter-paper one you could use ink on. Am I right?"

"You are," said Michael promptly. "Bright girl, Bunny. Brains."

He laid two pieces of paper down in front of him. "One bond and one newspaper," he said. "We will sort them."

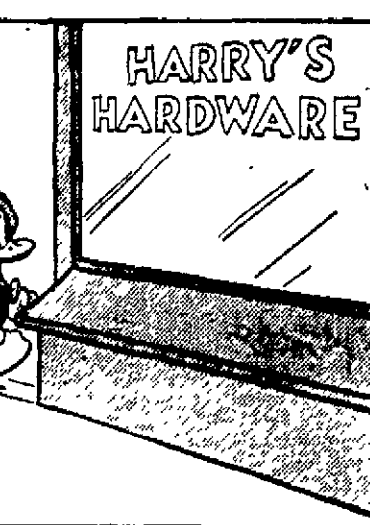

That was an easy matter, since the two kinds of paper were quite unmistakable. In a few moments all the papers lay in the two piles.

FIGHTING FIRE WITH FLIER

By parachuting down from an airplane, forest fire fighters can reach in a few minutes the isolated "spot" fire that may be a day away from their stations by horseback and foot. This U. S. Forest Service fire fighter was caught in a tree when the method was tested near Winthrop, Wash., but he saved himself from the "chute" and was ready for action. The fighters wear smoke masks, leave their abandoned parachutes behind to mark the spot where the plane should drop axes and other fire tools.

period expired last Friday Miss

Location of EarthquakeWhen the newspapers announce that there has been a major earthquake in some far distant land they may have received the information by cable or by radio, but sometimes the earthquake is in such an out of the way corner of the earth that no direct news can be sent to the outside world for days. In such cases scientists who make a specialty of earthquakes are able to say approximately where the quake occurred simply by consulting the record it transmitted directly to their recording instruments.The instrument commonly used consists of a delicate pen balanced on the tip of a long arm to which a heavy weight is attached, the whole suspended on a frictionless hinge. When the earth quakes the pen shakes and leaves a wavy record on a constantly moving paper, writes Austin E. Jones, in the Scientific American. Such instruments in their various forms, some of which are rather complex, seem mysterious to the average uninitiated person, but in recent times a few amateurs have constructed them at home and been able to record the great earthquakes in their own cellars hours before the newspaper announcements appeared.
They are driven constantly by means of the works from an inexpensive clock.Recommended as materials of construction are a concrete post, a 500-pound weight of scrap iron, some wires, bolts, pieces of good and other homemade gadgets. Such an instrument will make essentially the same wavy record of an earthquake, say in Japan or Java, India or Iran, as the scientists' instrument receives. The professional has his organization, the Seismological Society of America, to which numerous amateurs also belong.Poultry sizes and dams can be

Haver Gives Reply To DeWitt on Why He Quit Position

of this county have had handed to them in some time.
Mr. DeWitt also seems greatly concerned as to why I resigned as assistant district attorney a year ago and now seek the office of district attorney. Here are the facts:

Why Haver Resigned
For most of the years 1937 and 1938, I found that the duties of assistant district attorney were interfering to a considerable extent with my private practice. Due to the fact that my office was in the city of Kingston and Mr. Murray's office was in Ellenville, it was quite natural for me, being on the scene so to speak, to be frequently called upon to state the wheels of justice moving when a crime had been committed. I was subject to the call of the district attorney and was unable to plan my own work and there were numerous occasions when I found it necessary to disregard my own plans and affairs in order to give attention to the matters arising in the district attorney's office. If I am elected district attorney I feel that, being in charge of the office, I will be able to plan the work so that there will be a minimum of interference with my own practice.

Because my duties as assistant district attorney often interfered with my own work, I had been contemplating tendering my resignation to Mr. Murray for some time, and when I was requested to act as counsel in the defense of Charles Ford, I decided that it was a good opportunity to sever my connection with the district attorney's office. The Ford case was not the reason for my resignation, but was the deciding factor at the moment.

DeWitt's Speculation
Now that I have satisfied Mr. DeWitt's inquisitive turn of mind, let us turn to his second speculation, to-wit:
That I resigned so that I might undermine Mr. Murray and as Mr. DeWitt puts it "cop" the nomination for myself.
There is utterly no foundation for this charge in truth or in fact. It is purely a figment of Mr. DeWitt's vivid imagination. The fact of the matter is that I waited until the middle of July before I announced that I was a candidate for the office of district attorney. The Republican county convention was slated to be held July 29th, and at least one other attorney had already announced that he was a candidate for this office. I had had one or two talks with Mr. Murray prior to that time and, awaiting his decision, I made no public commitment or statement.
Mr. Murray finally advised me that he would not under any circumstances seek the nomination for a fourth term and told me that I was perfectly free to seek the nomination so far as he was concerned. It was not until I had this word from Mr. Murray that I announced that I was a candidate for the office. I again expressed in a speech reported in the Kingston Leader of Wednesday, October 25th, is one of the most despicable and cowardly attacks in which any candidate for public office in this county has ever indulged. So far as I am concerned, this is a closed issue. I refuse to be drawn into a campaign of personalities. I will not indulge in a battle of vilification or mud slinging. So far as I am concerned, the matter of my resignation and Mr. DeWitt's speculations is settled. I do not believe it pays to try to fool the voters by beclouding the issues. Regardless of the course that my opponent sees fit to pursue, I shall devote the balance of the duties of the office and the qualifications of a district attorney should have because I believe that this is what the voters are interested in.

HIS HAT HAS A STRING ON IT

In order to "assure the farm states a voice" Senator Charles McNary (R-Ore.) tossed his hat into the Republican Presidential ring, but he's shown here (on right) telling a reporter that there are strings attached to it. "In no sense am I interested," he told Washington newsmen, "except for the purpose of getting together on some candidate before we go to the national convention." Already in the Republican ring is the hat of Senator Robert P. Taft of Ohio. Others likely to get in are Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R-Mich.) and New York's District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

6,000,000 People In U. S. Depend Upon the Forests

At the weekly luncheon meeting of Kiwanis Thursday three new members were received into the club. They were George L. Chilson, Harold J. Poole and Joseph L. McCann, the formal welcome being given by Richard Shults.

Guests Thursday were J. O. Bassett and Harold Kukuk of Albany, Arnold Holmsen of Bridgeport, Conn., Siebolt H. Frieswyk of the National Recreation Association, New York, H. S. Shultis and Ben Adams of Kingston.

Mr. Frieswyk was presented by President Huben and gave a brief account of the work he has been doing here during the past two weeks in a survey of the musical life of the community. He said that Wednesday night at a meeting held at the Y. M. C. A. 30 young people had formed a community chorus. The first rehearsal will be held at the auditorium next Wednesday at 8 o'clock. Meanwhile arrangements are being made to secure music and a conductor for the group.

The story of the great lumbering business of the Pacific northwest, told in moving pictures with accompanying lecture featured the program of the day.

There were views of the magnificent forests of the northwest, with snow-capped mountains rising thousands of feet above them, forest streams and waterfalls, such as was true of the country as a whole before the coming of the white men.

The conquering of the wilderness was depicted, with covered wagons trailing west and steadily making their way despite hardships and dangers of every kind, including attacks by Indians, followed by the building of the transcontinental railroads, the clearing of the forests and the building up of towns.

Men were shown felling the giant trees of the northwest after which the huge trunks were cut into logs of proper size, brought out of the woods by logging trains which made their way along steep mountain sides and across valleys, then taken by water to mills where they were cut up into lumber of commercial sizes. All the various operations were shown in detail and there also was shown a pulp mill, to which much of the hickory is taken, for manufacture into wood pulp.

Other pictures showed the manner in which large sections of the country have been laid waste by forest fires and methods taken today, under more scientific forestry methods, to prevent these devastating fires.

Too, under present methods, seed areas are left when forest land is being cleared, so that seeds from these parent trees may be carried to the denuded sections, with the result that in a short time as many as 50,000,000 young seedlings to an acre may be found on cut-off land, to furnish a crop for the future.

It was noted that trees reach maturity, like other crops, and should be harvested as it was stated that some of the large trees shown were "ripe" when the Pilgrims landed in this country. The felling of an over-ripe tree was shown and it was pointed out that much of it already was decayed and useless.

One result of the expenditure that has been made—millions of dollars—to conserve and care for the forests, is the decrease in forest fires. It was stated that today but 10 per cent of fires are due to logging operations, the careless public being responsible for most of the rest.

Some 172,600,000 acres of forest lands today are set aside in national parks, for the benefit of the people. The importance of the lumber industry was shown in the statement that, including dependents, 6,000,000 people are directly interested in the forest industry.

man, pastor, will speak on the topic, "The Goodness and Mercy of God." This service will be in the form of a hymn sing with Mrs. Harold Hoffman in charge. The public is invited to attend. ## KINGSTON Sheriff Insists Fire Covers Double Murder

Yet everyone in Ellenville expected some day this couple might burn

Two bodies—charred ashes—stiff and straight beside two beds in the blackened, second-floor bedroom. Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Handelman of Ellenville were dead. But all knew that Handelman was careless with fire. Was it so strange, then, that his Pine Street home would burn? Yet Sheriff Abram Molyneux swore this elderly couple with no known enemies had been murdered.

How could he indicate in his sketch of the fire-gutted room that the set-up offended one of nature's laws? Upon what human reaction did he base his primary deduction and go forward with a murder investigation? What was the clinching clue that proved the Sheriff was right? What was the motive in this strange crime?

Don't miss a detail of this thrilling fact detective story of how a clever officer risked public ridicule to back his own convictions. It appears under the title, "People Don't Burn That Way," in the December issue.

Professor A. J. Pratt of the department of vegetable crops at Cornell, says leaves are valuable, for when decayed they form humus, and humus in the garden helps keep the moisture in the ground and thus helps to prevent dry weather injury. Humus also helps the soil in many other ways. Save the leaves this year and help build the garden soil, he urges. They can easily be made into humus.

The New York state college of agriculture receives many requests on how bats may be removed from homes, stores, churches and theatres. If bats are in the attic, and their place of exit is found, this bat should be boarded up once the bats have left for their evening meal, a half-hour after dark, says Dr. W. J. Hamilton, Jr., of the zoology department at Cornell. "If this is not possible, five pounds of naphthalene flakes spread in the bat quarters will usually make them seek a pleasanter place to stay."

The Flower Girl

Dear Mrs. Post: My wedding reception is to be limited to immediate families and wedding attendants. I am having a little flower girl. Must the flower girl be invited to the breakfast and what about her parents? They are not relatives and I am not having the other attendants' parents. But mother thinks the flower girl is too young to be out without hers.

Answer: I should imagine that the parents of the little flower girl are probably younger than the parents of your other attendants. If this is the case, it would be understood by every one should you invite this one mother and father and not any of the others. The need to have some one to look after this child and also take her home is obvious.

How Much for Tips?

Dear Mrs. Post: When giving a party at a club and the bill comes to about a hundred dollars, is 10 per cent enough for service tips? Is one expected to give something for the people in the kitchen?

Answer: Ten per cent is sufficient. The larger the bill the more exact the 10 per cent may be. It is when the bill is very small that one gives a little more than 10 per cent—sometimes as much as 20 per cent.

Announcing a Sister's Marriage

Dear Mrs. Post: We are four sisters. Our parents are dead and we have no brothers. The two eldest sisters are unmarried, the youngest married and the third about to be married. Which one of us should announce the engagement and the coming marriage, and whose name should appear on the wedding announcements?

Answer: The oldest sister alone makes both announcements.

A Question on Room Furnishing

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it bad taste to put a sofa or a desk across the corner of a room? Some one has told me it is out of style, but in my living room this seems to be the only way the sofa will fit nicely into the room. Answer: Place it whichever way or wherever you think it looks best. The secret of giving personality to the furnishing of a room is to have it the way you, who live in it, like it! If you think it is becoming to the room, and if it is comfortable for your use, then it is right. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

FDR Says Neutrality Foes Are Setting Up 'Bogey Man'

New York, Oct. 27 (AP)—Strongly reaffirming American neutrality, President Roosevelt last night said critics of his foreign policy who have warned it would force American boys to shoulder arms abroad were guilty of "one of the worst fakes in current history."

"It is a deliberate setting up of an imaginary bogey man," he added cautiously.

The President spoke last night on the closing program of the ninth annual Herald-Tribune forum on current problems, after King Leopold III of Belgium declared it was vital for his country because of economic reasons to remain at peace but that Belgium was ready to fight, if necessary, to preserve its independence.

The heads of the two nations spoke from their respective capitals. The speeches were broadcast nationally in this country. Leopold was also heard throughout Europe in English, French and Flemish re-broadcasts from Belgian stations.

of Congress who he said have been "beating their breasts and proclaiming against sending the boys of American mothers to fight on the battlefields of Europe."

"That I do not hesitate to label as one of the worst fakes in current history," he declared. "The simple truth is that no person in any responsible place in the national administration in Washington, or in any state government, or in any city government, has ever suggested in any shape, manner or form the remotest possibility of sending the boys of American mothers to fight on the battlefields of Europe."

"That is why I label that argument, a shameless and dishonest fake."

acknowledging it was impossible for Americans to be neutral in thought as well as in act, the President said:

"The fact of the international situation—the simple fact, without any bogey in it, without any appeals to prejudice—is that the United States, as I have said before, is neutral and does not intend to get involved in war."

Leopold Speaks

King Leopold, speaking in fluent English during his six-minute broadcast, said Belgium stood side by side with Holland, "an island of peace in the interests of all."

"We are prepared to exert our entire strength in order to uphold our independence," he added.

"Exactly 25 years ago, day for day, the Belgian army under the command of my father, King Albert, arrested after a hard battle the progress of a cruel invasion."

"If we were attacked—and pray God this may not happen in violation of the solemn and definite undertakings that were given us in 1937 and were renewed at the outset of the present war—we would not hesitate to fight with the same conviction, but with forces 10 times stronger."

Pope Pius Blames 'Denial' for War

state or group into the last end of life, the supreme criterion of moral and juridical order, and therefore forbids every appeal to the principles of natural reason and Christian conscience.

"Fortunately, false principles do not always exercise their full influence, especially when the age-old Christian traditions on which peoples have been nurtured remain still deeply, even if unconsciously, rooted in their hearts," the Pope declared.

Poland, the pontiff said, "has the right to generous brotherly sympathy while it awaits . . . the hour of resurrection in harmony with principles of justice and true peace."

Pope Pius described his "expectation and conviction that each party will respect its pledged word" in treaties as an indispensable condition of peace.

He said peace could not be achieved until "both sides are ready to enter into discussion and avoid recourse to force or threats of force in case of delays, hindrances, changes or disputes."

The Pope acknowledged that treaties might become outdated with the passing of time. In such cases, he said, "recourse should be had to frank discussion with a view to modifying the treaty or making another in its stead."

"But to consider treaties on principle as ephemeral," he declared, "and tacitly to assume the authority of rescinding them unilaterally when they no longer are to one's advantage would be to abolish all mutual trust among states."

Turning from causes of the present war to prospects of a more enduring settlement at its conclusion, the pontiff asked whether there would be a new international order "animated by justice and equity towards all" or "repetition of ancient and recent errors."

The hour of victory, he warned, is "the hour of temptation." "The danger exists that 'settlements and decisions born in such condition may be nothing else than injustice under the cloak of justice.'"

The only hope for the future, the pontiff said, was that the new order instead of resting on "quicksands of ephemeral standards that depend only on selfish interests of groups and individuals" should be based on an "unshakeable foundation on the solid rock of natural law and divine revelation."

The Pope recalled with sorrow the failure of his own efforts to avert war.

His holiness said he considered it his duty to "try every means to spare mankind and Christianity the horrors of world conflagration even at the risk of having our intentions and aims misunderstood."

"Our advice if heard with respect was not, however, followed," he observed.

The Pope expressed especially his sorrow for Poland, saying "the blood of countless human beings, even non-combatants, raises a pitiful dirge over a nation such as our dear Poland which for its fidelity to the church, for its services in the defense of Christian civilization, written in indelible characters in the annals of history has the right of generous, brotherly sympathy of the whole world." The pontiff promised to do all in his power to hasten return of peace. He would continue his efforts, he said, "trusting in those statesmen who before the outbreak of war nobly toiled to avert such a scourge from their peoples, trusting in millions of souls in all countries of every sphere who call not for justice alone but for love and mercy."

Know Today's Social Code

Admiring eyes follow the young girl who is sure of her etiquette. How poised, how charming she is in any situation!

Leaving a party, she's not flustered when a newly-met admirer steps forward to say good-by. She lets him say first "I'm glad to have met you," for that's the man's privilege. Then with a gracious smile she replies, "I hope I meet you again."

Times when a girl may properly take the lead? After a man has been introduced to her it's correct for her to begin the conversation. Also, when on a two-some dancing date at a hotel or roof garden, she may suggest dancing.

But a girl doesn't ask a boy to call—though of course she can cleverly hint he'd be welcome. Or she may ask him to her house with a group of friends.

Boys have social obligations, too—in dating, ordering a meal, showing courtesy to a hostess.

Our 32-page booklet gives etiquette for all occasions—dates, dances, hotels, traveling, clubs, visiting. Discusses entertaining, school and college parties, the petting question, office manners—the rules every young modern needs to know.

Send 10c in coin for your copy of ETIQUETTE FOR YOUNG MODERNS to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

OVER THE HILLS AND NOT FAR AWAY—A never-falling thrill to the huntsman is the pack "in full cry" as it catches the scent, and here's the start of a chase for the Rolling Rock Hunt pack of Ligonier, Pa., believed the largest pack in the country. Frederick Hedges, who leads pack, can call any hound by its given name.

CAME LOVE—After three attempts to sail his two-master from Vineyard Haven, Mass., to Fairhaven, Capt. Zebulon Tilton, 72, finally reached the mainland, joining there Mrs. Grace McDonald, 62, a widow whom he plans to wed. The cap'n explained: "The wind was dead against me." When objection to the wedding was hinted, he said "No one would try to break up a real love."

Newburgh Secretary Addresses YW Club

Miss Ruth Linn Fraser, general secretary of the Newburgh Y. W. C. A., was the guest speaker at the Married Women's Club Thursday afternoon. Miss Fraser spent 10 years in China doing Y. W. C. A. work and spoke to the members on life in China during her stay there 20 years ago. She has been home for 10 years.

Miss Fraser was stationed for the most part in Chengtu, which had a population of approximately half a million. It was the capital of the big western province where the government is now located.

In those days it was a month's trip from Shanghai by steamer and sedan chair to Chengtu. Now, according to Miss Fraser, the trip can be made in less than 12 hours by plane.

A large proportion of the population of Chengtu is intelligent and it is at present the center of Chinese civilization. Christianity began with the poorer classes because they were more easily influenced.

Miss Fraser discussed the life of the Chinese women when she was in China, explaining the differences socially between the well-to-do and the poorer classes. She also gave examples of the changes that had taken place during her stay, stating that in 1918 at a Y. W. C. A. conference two-thirds of the population was foreign and one-third Chinese. At a conference in 1928, two-thirds were Chinese and one-third foreign. This fact also explains a reason why so many of the "Y" workers have returned to America as more and more Chinese workers are beginning to carry on the work.

The Y. W. C. A. work has grown, said Miss Fraser, because Christianity has become more popular. When Miss Fraser went to Chengtu, Christianity was only 40 years old.

In organizing the Y. W. C. A. the board is made up of Chinese women. Those having education are outstanding. In speaking of the policies of the "Y" in China, Miss Fraser referred to the customs of concubinage. A concubine is not welcomed as a member of the Y. W. C. A.

Following the meeting tea was served with Mrs. Harry Relyea, as hostess. The next meeting will be held Thursday, November 2, at 10 a. m. for the sewing service meeting. Mrs. Adam Thiel will be in charge of the sewing and Mrs. Raymond E. Craft in charge of the luncheon which will be served at noon.

GRANGE NEWS

Patron Grange, No. 1519

The regular meeting of Patron Grange was held in their rooms on Monday, October 23, with Master Percy W. Gazlay presiding.

A pot luck supper was served before the meeting at 7 o'clock to all the members in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Bell, who were married recently. Mrs. Bell was formerly Miss Jennie Depuy. Table decorations and a floral favor for each one were donated by Valley Gardens.

The service and hospitality committee reported that the evening of games held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Anderson was a success and that the next one would be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gross B. Schoonmaker on Thursday, November 16.

Notice was given that election of officers would take place at the next meeting, November 13. The four-county Grange meeting will be held at Newburgh Saturday evening, November 4, at the high school, and Stone Ridge Grange will represent Ulster county by putting on the fourth degree. The Masters and Officers Association will meet at Ulster Park Wednesday evening, November 8. Pomona Grange will meet at Rosendale Friday, December 1, afternoon and evening, with fifth degree work in the evening.

The lecturer's program, in charge of Elizabeth Schoonmaker, opened with the song, "Smile, Smile, Smile," and was followed by a reading, "Expanding Our Public Domain," Wendell Knapp. Jennie Bell read a poem, "Right." An article on "The Fruit Situation," by Ethel Depuy, "Means of Success," Mildred Kelder. A reading by Frank Kelder on the Record Landscape Project at Park Chester, Bronx, brought out that the World's Fair landscape architect had charge of this project covering 150 acres of apartments to house 50,000 people and would have 45 acres of lawn. Mrs. McAniff read "Dry Weather," and the program closed with the singing of "In the Garden" and "Love's Old Sweet Song."

The lecturer announced that moving pictures were available and would be used in the near future. She also appointed Archie Hall-Davis and V. A. Barnhart as captains of a debate to be held at the meeting November 27. The subject to be debated is: Resolved, that we favor the new world calendar. Brother Davis has the affirmative side of the question.

Owens Early U. S. Relic

One of the most interesting historical relics in the United States is an original copy of the Declaration of Independence. The document, ranking with the Liberty Bell itself in national interest, is owned by Mrs. F. E. Holiday of Kansas City, Mo., and is kept in a safe deposit box. Tradition runs that the signers of the Declaration, the original of which is kept under guard in the Congressional library in Washington, desired to have copies for themselves as memorials of their work, writes a correspondent to the Kansas City Times. The copies were undertaken, but owing to the difficulty of communication between the colonies, requiring considerable time for a copy to make the rounds and receive the signatures, only five were ever made before death prevented the plan from being carried out. Not all of these copies are accounted for.

Mrs. Holiday's copy, it is believed, was given to Joseph Hewes, one of the signers, who was one of her ancestors. She has received communications from officers of the Smithsonian institution and Congressional library, who desired to purchase the relic and place it with other national treasures, but she has never placed a price on it or intimated that it was for sale.

Opaque Glass in Homes

An opaque structural glass paneling, long a favorite for modern store, theater, and building fronts, is making its entry into the home. This glass paneling is becoming increasingly popular for walls and wainscoting in kitchens and bathrooms. Besides being ultra-modern in appearance, the material is said to have unusual resistance to wear. Available in a rich variety of plain and agate colors, it has a high luster. Among the advantages this type of wall material claims are that it will not warp, swell, or craze. It is nonabsorbent and resistant to staining and to burns from cigarettes. Applications of soap and water are said to keep it clean.

Mrs. Walter Houston, Caspar, Wyo., thinks she got her money's worth out of a dozen eggs she purchased recently. Each egg in the dozen had a double yolk.

Coffey to Vote In Wawarsing

John W. Coffey, who formerly cast his vote in Gardiner, will vote this year in District 9, town of Wawarsing. Justice Schirick yesterday directed the inspectors of election to place the name of Coffey on the rolls after the case had been heard before him on a show cause order. Benjamin Lonsstein of Ellenville appeared for Coffey and argued a show cause order which Coffey had secured against the inspectors of election of the Kerhonkson district.

It was shown that Coffey was employed on the New York city water works and was rooming at the Harry Smith place in Kerhonkson. He contended that he maintained his residence there and was entitled to vote there. The contention of the inspectors was that Coffey's legal voting residence was in Gardiner where he voted last and where he still had most of his personal effects. Louis G. Bruhn appeared for Floyd Eck, Oscar Green, Albert Weiss and Everett Decker, inspectors of election of the district.

Justice Schirick held that the voter had a right to vote in Kerhonkson where he was now living. When a person maintained several residences his right to elect the place for casting his vote was his right, the court held.

Dr. Seeley Goes to Meeting

Port Fogbound Ship Baffles Customs

New York, Oct. 26 (AP)—A pea-soup fog blanketed New York harbor today, virtually stalling traffic and causing immigration and customs officials a fruitless hour and a half chase in quest of a liner.

Visibility was restricted to 150 yards at Sandy Hook.
A coast guard cutter went down the bay at 7 a. m. whistling noisily, to meet the United States liner American Merchant from Belfast. But not until the cutter returned to her berth was it discovered that the liner had passed unnoticed through the fog and was already docked.

The American Merchant's radio operator reported hearing distress calls from eight ships—seven British and one French—in the first three days out of Belfast, starting October 16.

"I should have done it long ago," Richmond quoted her.

Spectacular Blackout
Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 27 (AP)—Whether permitting one of nature's most spectacular "blackouts" will be visible tonight. Harvard astronomers set for 10:42 P.M. "Only a thin sliver of the moon will be visible at the time of greatest obscuration when 99.2 per cent of the moon's surface will be blocked off," said Dr. Fletcher Watson.

Roosevelt Brands Dies Publication Sordid Procedure

Washington, Oct. 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt branded as "sordid procedure" today publication by the Dies committee of the names of more than 500 government employees on the "membership and mailing list" of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

The committee charged that the league was a "front" for Communist activity.
Asked to comment on publication of the list this week, the President told a press conference he had not read enough of the details of that rather "sordid procedure" to comment.

He agreed to a reporter's request that direct quotation of the phrase be permitted, a departure from the usual press conference procedure.

Bid to Dempsey
New York, Oct. 26 (AP)—The American League for Peace and Democracy today telegraphed Rep. John J. Dempsey, of New Mexico, urging him to resign from the Dies committee in protest against its "inquisitorial, un-American and unconstitutional acts."

The telegram said: "Fully concur in your statement that Dies committee was 'damnable un-American' in releasing mailing list of Washington Branch (of the league). Trust that you will disassociate from inquisitorial, un-American and unconstitutional acts of Dies committee by resigning. Signed, higher, have been lower during our administration than they have been during the past ten years. No resident of Kingston has been turned out of his home because of unpaid taxes.

Heiselman Points At City's Sound Economic Status

In some cities, so much money has been borrowed that the cities have reached their legal debt limit and can borrow no more. In Kingston this has not happened. While some of the costs of relief have been financed by borrowings, the credit structure of the city is sound, and we still have a wide borrowing margin to meet any future emergency that might arise. The recent sale of city bonds at an annual interest rate of less than one percent is the best possible proof of our financial stability.

Special Favors To None
In some cities, public funds have been grossly wasted in building up corrupt political machines. Graft, favoritism and corruption are rife. In other cities, those in public office have been known to expend the taxpayers' money in order to benefit their own personal business enterprises in which they are engaged.

In Kingston this has not happened during our administration. Public funds have been expended in such a way as to get the greatest possible value for the people of Kingston as a whole.

The manner in which we have achieved these results is known to the thinking people of this city who are interested in honest, sound, humane government.

These things have been accomplished because we have not wasted, but have conserved, public funds. We saved thousands of dollars by business-like purchasing methods, by improved operating procedures, by training municipal employees to act as public servants of the people, thereby improving the quality of service and increasing the efficiency of operations. Many of our employees have attended training schools for municipal employees as conducted by the Mayor's Conference and their increased ability has contributed to improved municipal services.

To sum the case up briefly, during our administration we have successfully handled the tremendous problem of relief without curtailing municipal services but improving them instead, and at the same time, without impairing the financial security of the city, we have reduced the taxes. No city of the nation could have done more than this in meeting and solving the complex and difficult problems of the past six years.

These results were not accomplished without the necessity for brushing aside the advocates of unsound municipal policies which if followed would have wrecked the city. One of these unsound policies is the reckless spending of public funds. It is the easiest thing in the world to spend some one else's money. Some unsound policies are pleasant to content plate but, like the Pied Piper of

Home Bureau Members Make Tour of Kitchens

Members of the Ulster County Home Bureau today are taking a demonstration tour of different kitchens at a number of homes throughout the county. In addition to the kitchens several living rooms that have been unproved through home bureau cooperation will be open for inspection.

The photo above shows the kitchen in the H. M. Eppes residence in Accord. Particular attention is called to the efficient shelf arrangement. All of the kitchen proper is in one corner of the room leaving ample room at the other end for a dining nook.

Hamlin they lead to destruction. It took foresight, restraint, intelligence and courage to reject these false prophets which would have destroyed the security of our city, but because we did so, we successfully weathered the storm and brought the good ship City of Kingston safely into the harbor of security.

But One Safe Way
There is only one safe, sound way in which to conduct the affairs of any city. And that is to limit budgetary municipal expenditures to a point where the taxpayers can afford to pay the bill. To do otherwise is to court disaster.

The simple truth is that taxpayers cannot pay any more than they can pay. When taxes are higher than the taxpayer can pay, tax delinquencies pile up, taxes do not flow into the city's till. And, when the money does not come into the till, you know the money cannot get out of the till. That means that the merchant who sells the city goods and services does not get paid and the municipal employee either loses his job entirely, or else he works without his pay envelope. When that happens, municipal chaos follows.

The theory that a city can spend more from its budget than it takes in in taxes and revenues is false and fallacious. This has been proved by the disaster which has been visited upon many cities who practiced such a theory.

City Sound Financially
Kingston, during the past six years, has not been operated on any such theory. Kingston has been operated on a safe, sound, humane, progressive basis. We have discharged our responsibilities. We have marched steadily forward. We have paid our bills. Our financial reputation was never higher. We face the future hopefully and confidently. Our feet stand firmly on a sound foundation. Having safely weathered the storm of adversity, we face the future with the confidence that the trials and hardships and experiences of the past six years equip us to successfully meet and solve any problem of the future, no matter how difficult.

If the voters of Kingston wish to keep the same tried, tested and experienced captain on the bridge of the good ship City of Kingston for another two years of the perilous voyage, they will have an opportunity to say so when they go to the polls on Election Day.

Recreational Program
Alderman-at-large Schwenk devoted his address to an outline of the recreational program for both young and old that has been placed in operation during the Heiselman administration. Alderman Schwenk said:

"Tonight I wish to talk about something that this administration initiated which has provided pleasure for each and every citizen of Kingston, whether they be taxpayer, rentpayer, man or woman, young or old. What I have in mind is the excellent recreational program which was started by Mayor Heiselman in 1935, and which, because it has been so capably directed, has developed into a year-round program under a full time salaried director. To say that this undertaking has succeeded is best evidenced by city-wide commendation and the demands made on the Department of Recreation to increase the facilities and activities."

Let me review the formation of the Recreation Department. The Mayor and I attended our first Mayor's Conference at Jamestown way back in 1934, had the good fortune to hear Chief of Police Morris of Geneva tell of the excellent results they had obtained through the formation of a Recreation Program, directed by a volunteer committee of outstanding Geneva citizens. Shortly after our return, I received a letter from Mayor Heiselman requesting me to join other civic minded citizens at a meeting in his office for the purpose of organizing a volunteer committee to sponsor supervised recreational activities in the City of Kingston. At this meeting we had the advantage of detailed reports sent me by Chief Morris in response to my request.

Program Formulated
With this information and with the benefit of the experience brought into discussion by the other members present, a definite recreational program was formulated and a Recreation Committee appointed. This important step was undertaken within a few months after Mayor Heiselman assumed office. So you can see that he realized the need for such a program and lost no time in getting it under way.

Last week, Fred Stang discussed what Mayor Heiselman, through his recreation committee, has done for the youth of the city, and while I am intensely interested in the two fields covered by the Department of Recreation, namely youth and adult recreation, I want to stress tonight what has been done by this administration for our older citizens.

With the establishment in Kingston of one of the finest year-round recreational programs for children, there has come the development of a year-round program of recreational opportunities for adults, which takes in practically every desirable type of activity, both athletic and cultural. During the past three years the Department of Recreation has made available to the men and women of Kingston recreational facilities on a scale never before attempted in the history of the city. The favorable record of recreational activity during the past three years, on the part of adults, is an example of community participation of which the city government can well be proud.

Adult Activities
Let me enumerate some of these adult activities:

Four softball leagues for adults flourished here during the past year, with a total of 39 teams and approximately 720 men taking part. Of these, the Open League and Industrial League were both under the direct supervision of the Department of Recreation, the Catholic Church League, operating for the first time, was established through the cooperation of the Department of Recreation and the league of the Men's Federation of Churches worked in direct cooperation with the city's recreation department and with the use of its facilities.

Women's softball was organized for the first time this year, providing opportunity for recreation in this activity approximately 60 women. In addition to the several league teams, about fifteen unaffiliated softball teams were encouraged in their use of park facilities, thus bringing the total number of men and women actually participating in this single sport to the unprecedented number of nearly 1,000, plus the great number of people who received enjoyment through watching these games at the various city softball diamonds.

The success of the local Industrial Baseball League and the opportunity of participating and watching this athletic activity was made possible to a great number of our people largely through the cooperation of the local city government. The use of the Athletic Field was secured, the diamond was set in shape, and seating facilities were provided through the use of city bleachers. Without the city's interest in this sport, thousands would have been deprived of the opportunity to enjoy the great American game of baseball.

Sports Added To Program
Two years ago, basketball was introduced to the adult program with the formation of the City Basketball League. During the past basketball season, under the sponsorship of the Department of Recreation, 12 teams took part in this program at the Municipal Auditorium. 263 men took advantage of this activity. During this week, plans are being drawn up for a program of basketball even greater than before. Teams are being drawn up in three leagues, an Open League, Industrial League, and Catholic Church League, under the guidance of the Recreation Department. These groups will use the facilities of the Municipal Auditorium and the Myron J. Michael School.

An increased interest in tennis has been developed among adults through tennis tournaments sponsored by the city during the past two seasons. Nearly fifty entrants in this year's tournament, both men and women, shows how widespread this interest has grown. Eight city tennis courts have been in constant use, necessitating plans for enlargement of facilities for this sport with the result that eight more courts are to be constructed in the very near future.

Track Activities
Track activity was fostered by the city for the first time with the sponsorship of the First Annual Hudson Valley Track and Field Championships. This track meet, made possible by the completion of one of the nation's finest tracks, at the new Municipal Stadium, brought to Kingston many of the world's greatest track and field men, as well as leading track athletes of the Hudson Valley. The Junior Division of this meet was won by the track team sponsored by the local Department of Recreation and made up, for the most part, of men out of high school who never before have had the opportunity of continuing their interest in this sport.

A program of outdoor winter activities, in which adults as well as children were encouraged to take part, was made possible last winter with the flooding of tennis courts for ice-skating and the development of Lawton Park for sledding and skiing. Many adults also made use of skating opportunities at Hasbrouck Park. More is planned along these lines by the city and a project for NYA boys, set up by the city government, has already been approved, for the erection of a winter shelter at Lawton Park for those taking part in the outdoor program there.

Thousands Benefited
Thousands of local citizens have benefited by the recreation program through their attendance at and participation in the Community Night Program at the local playgrounds during the summer months. These programs, conducted once a week at each of the city's play areas, have brought enjoyment to countless adults as well as children. Athletics, entertainment, and talking movies at Community Nights have given recreational advantages to thousands who otherwise would not have been able to purchase these enjoyments.

In addition to the organized activities, the city has sponsored and encouraged participation in unorganized adult activity which has received an unusually fine response. Hundreds of adults have made use of the playground facilities for unorganized games of volleyball, horse-shoe pitching, and many other similar activities.

The public was encouraged to use the enlarged accommodations for picnicking provided at Hasbrouck, Forsyth and Clearwater Parks, with the result that many thousands have taken advantage of the increased facilities. These included many large churches and other organizations as well as small family groups. The development of Lawton, Clearwater and the upper area at Hasbrouck Park for family picnics has proven itself invaluable as shown by the great number of families who used these facilities throughout the summer months.

The development of Lawton Park for Union Church Services on Sunday was thankfully received by the hundreds of people of all creeds who attended these services under the sponsorship of the Ministerial Association. The Department of Recreation is not limiting itself to activities in the Athletic Field, but is now turning its attention to the cultural level with the hope of encouraging adult participation in a well rounded community music program and an increased development of dramatic activities. For the many people who are not interested in athletics, this type of activity will provide a welcome outlet for recreational interests.

Further Plan
Further plans are being developed by this city department so that it will eventually have attained its goal of providing a recreational opportunity for every adult, as well as for every child in the community. More softball diamonds are being constructed to supply the increasing demands, opportunities for athletic activity by women is being made possible through the establishment of adult women's softball and basketball leagues; adult music and dramatic activity will be developed; and programs of craft work for adults will be introduced.

At the present time the City of Kingston has one of the best, well rounded recreational programs for both adults and children of any city of similar size not only of this state but of many other states of this section of the country as well. Furthermore, this entire program is being carried out on one of the lowest per capita costs in the country. Therefore, in view of such a comprehensive recreational program, and in view of the large number of children and adults benefited thereby, I feel no impartial and unbiased citizen of our city would hesitate to say that the present administration has accomplished something for the citizens of Kingston of which they may be justly proud.

Lost Caverns Found Again
London, Oct. 27 (AP)—The long lost caverns of Blackheath have been found again and they may be turned into an air raid shelter for suburban Greenwich. The caves—four rooms in the chalky earth under the site of one of the world's first golf courses—were open to the public for years but in 1853 they were closed as unsafe. Fallen material blocked the entrance and they were forgotten.

Glamour, Sports Church League Not Good Mixture, Says Rodeo Queen

New York, Oct. 27 (AP)—The cute little girl who almost took the rodeo at Madison Square Garden out of the sports pages and put it in the society section doesn't think glamour and sports are a very good mixture.

The 17-year-old Canadian, Tex. cowgirl, ranch-operator and sweetheart of the 14th annual world championship rodeo (as it's modestly billed) is pretty Sydney Yockley. After she got through pitching a calf on its mutton chops she parked herself in the press box and offered a few caustic comments. To wit:

"The eight girls brought here to add 'glamour' to the show are all adorable girls and they can all preside beautifully over a tea party, but they haven't any business in a rodeo," she said.

"And they feel the same way. Beauty and this business"—majestically indicating the Garden and its queer mixture of bow-legged cowhands and pop-eyed spectators—"don't mix. I think it was silly to try."

She referred to the eight girls, daughters of first rank Texas families, who give an exhibition of horsemanship every night and who got more advance publicity than the champion riders.

That seemed a little odd coming from the girl who has been dined, headlined and feted and who for 25 days has almost made New York forget its football.

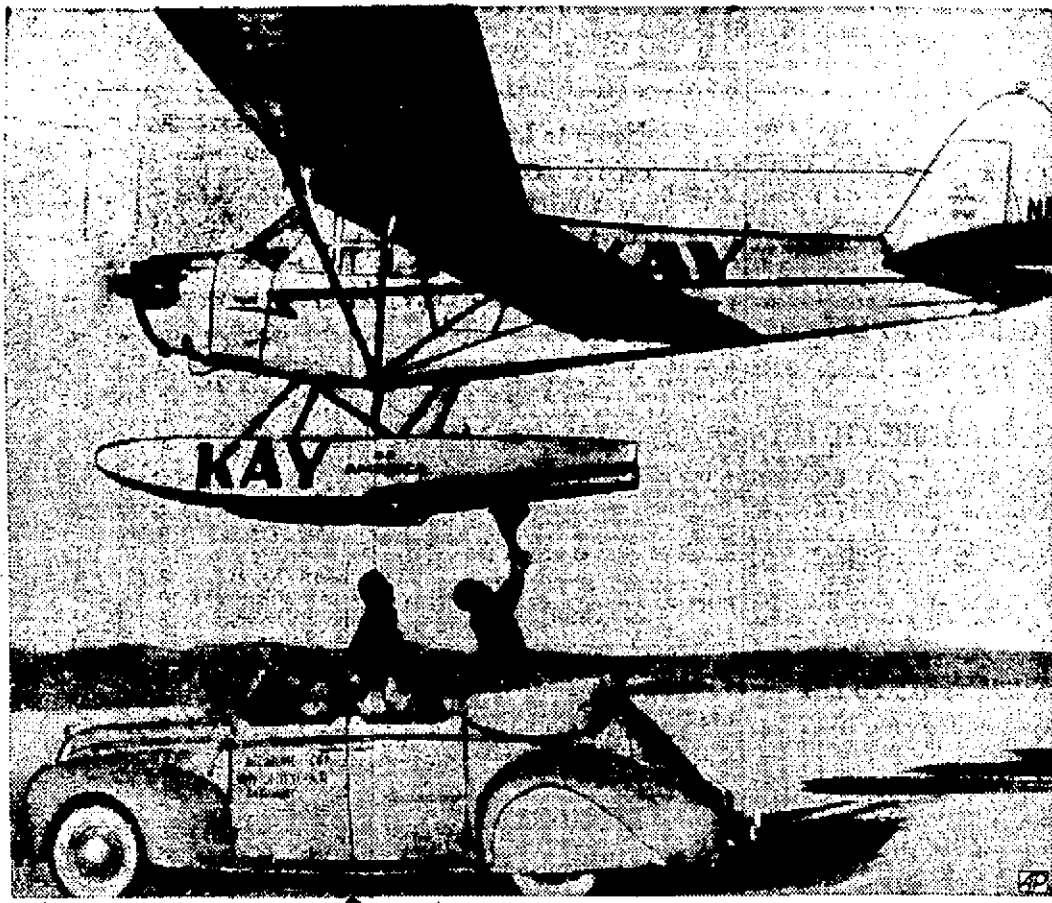

But she sounded sincere. Those pretty eyes had picked out some other flaws, too.

"The men? I like southwestern men much better than New Yorkers," she said. "These easterners are too artificial."

UP IN THE AIR—FOR A MONTH

Clyde Schleper and West Carroll droned on and on in their light seaplane at Lancaster, Calif., after breaking the old endurance-plane flight record of 653 hours, 33 minutes. The Long Beach fliers weren't content to smash the record, but planned to come down Sunday after staying in the air a full month. They are shown here receiving a can of gasoline from the ground crew, which operated from a speeding automobile, after the pair passed their 634th hour in the air.

Cahill Stresses County Economy

Urging the election of a Republican board of supervisors and a board of aldermen, City Judge Matthew V. Cahill was one of the speakers at the big Republican rally in Cook's Hall on Thursday evening.

The city judge called attention to the fact that it was important in the interest of continued good government in the city and county to elect Republican supervisors and aldermen.

With the county controlled by a Republican board of supervisors, said the judge, it had been possible to establish a sound financial policy, which had resulted in the county being one of the few that was entirely free of debt.

It was equally important to elect a Republican common council, he said, who would work in harmony with the administration in its plan to continue efficient good government in the city.

Following the speaking program Fred L. Van Deusen, widely known local magician, entertained the audience with several feats of magic.

The last rally of the season to be held in Cook's Hall will be staged next Thursday evening at which time there will be both speaking and entertainment.

WPA Writers Must Do 300 Words Daily

New York, Oct. 27 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Erehon B. Somervell, local WPA administrator, said today that 80 workers on WPA writers projects here had been fired for "incompetence" and would be offered jobs as WPA common laborers.

Col. Somervell said the 150 remaining writers on the projects would be required to turn out 300 words a day—approximately a typewritten page. He said this way the project could produce 150 volumes a year.

"That is all anyone would want to publish," he observed. At one time 500 persons were employed on the WPA writers' projects here, but officials complained there was not enough work to keep them busy and that they became involved in political activities.

charge of explosives in the engine room, prepared to blow up the ship if they encountered trouble. Later they entered an area of floating ice and the Germans painted out the freighter's name, substituting "Alf" for "City of Flint" and painting the Danish flag on the side.

McConnochie said there was nothing wrong either with the engines or navigation facilities of the City of Flint.

McConnochie said a water shortage developed that forced the freighter to put in at Tromsø. There the British survivors were permitted to land. The radio operator said that because of his manner of speech he was able to mix with them and land successfully.

McConnochie said that the American crew members, although worried by their plight, were not treated badly by their German captors and that nothing untoward had happened to any at the time he slipped off the ship at Tromsø.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—The stock market balked at recovery efforts today, with pivotal issues losing fractions to 2 points or more.

Volume dwindled on the slump and transfers were at the rate of approximately 1,000,000 shares. Near the final hour some stores were a shade better than their worst.

Failure of yesterday's rally in the rails to hold, brokers said, discouraged traders who lightened their positions until sentiment to the future could be tested a little better.

While many in Wall Street feel that the market is considerably behind business recovery, analysts said today that in war time stocks generally sell at a lower ratio or price to earnings than in times of peace.

Foreign markets were generally firm. Bonds tended lower and commodities were mixed.

Depressed most of the session were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Phelps Dodge, Westinghouse Electric, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Allied Chemical, Electric Auto Lite, International Harvester, Caterpillar, Great Northern and Santa Fe.

Off in the curb were Colts Firearms, Niles-Bement-Pond and American Cyanamid "B."

SENATE HALTS BAN ON ARMED SHIPS

Legislation whereby the armed, the country's interests would be better served by permitting the president to fix regulations under which armed merchantmen and submarines could enter United States ports. This authority, already vested in the president, would be reaffirmed by the bill.

Senator Connally (D-Tex.) said that to adopt the language of the Clark amendment would be "to practically destroy commerce with any belligerent."

Senator McCarran (D-Nev.), supporting Clark, argued that if submarines were to be barred from American waters, the same ban should be applied to armed merchantmen.

Net Earnings Show Rise in Business

As reports of the business corporations of the country for the third quarter of this year come in they continue to show gains, in many cases large, over a year ago. At the same time business indices reflect increasing momentum of the upswing in business and industry.

Thus Barron's index of the physical volume of business for the week ended October 21, stood at 89.6 per cent of normal, as against 85.4 per cent the previous week. The present mark compares with 89 per cent a year ago and is the highest level reached since March, 1937.

For the same week carloadings made a contrasensational gain of 16,243 cars over the previous week, to a total of 861,198, a highest level in nine years.

Indications of the rise in business over a year ago is indicated by reports of net earnings for the third quarter. Net of $5,377,470, or $1.10 a share vs. net in the third quarter of 1938 of $46,886. Mondaco Chemical, $1,296,914 vs. $690,743. American Steel Foundries, net of $75,191 vs. net loss year ago of $543,533. Gillette Razor, $801,453 vs. $631,298. Hershey Chocolate, $1,925,900 vs. $1,355,980. Houdaille-Hershey, $9,005, vs. net loss last year of $59,013. Childs $14,256, vs. net loss in the 1938 quarter of $342,777. Lone Star Cement, $967,201 vs. $805,588.

Packard Motor shows net loss for the third quarter of $1,009,476 compared with loss in the 1938 quarter of $2,053,825; for the nine months to September 30 net loss was $2,030,092, vs. loss of $8,228,790 in same period last year. Buick eroid had net of $293,871 for the third quarter vs. net of $345,773 year ago.

Boston & Maine had September net of $352,066 vs. net loss in September, 1938, of $738,894. New Haven showed net in September of $240,941 compared with a loss in the 1938 month of $2,973,577. Pennsylvania had September net estimated at over $5,000,000, vs. $2,660,201 year ago.

With a backing which averaged from $12,000,000 to over $26,000,000 in September Boeing Aircraft has arranged for loan of as much as $5,500,000 from RFC and banks, for working capital.

Bethlehem Steel is reported operating at 100 per cent of capacity, with backlog highest in peace time history and incoming business more than capacity. President Grace is quoted as opposing a rise in steel prices unless there is an increase in costs.

Industrial stocks opened above Wednesday's close but lost ground in the final hour of trading Thursday and showed a net loss for the day of 1.43 points in the Dow Jones averages, to 154.05. Rails also lost 38 point, to 34.75. Utilities continued upward, gaining .11 point, to 26.37. Despite the showing, 60 stocks made new highs for 1939 during the day and but one made a new low.

Commodities eased off with sugar futures showing a sharp decline and cotton and wheat selling lower. Supplies of wheat sugar available for the balance of the year are said to be more than ample and gains of almost a cent a pound registered in the first week in September have been lost.

Unfilled orders for men's wear fabrics are said to total 25,000,000 to 40,000,000 yards, more than double business on mill books a year ago.

FDR Praises Navy

Washington, Oct. 27 (AP).—The largest and most powerful American navy in 17 years was sold by President Roosevelt today that it was the nation's chief reliance to "keep out of the European war." "The most promising way to preserve our peace lies in the ability to defend our sea frontiers," Mr. Roosevelt said in a Navy Day letter to Acting Secretary Charles Edison. "That peace we shall strive to maintain by all honorable and advanced means. With the world in arms, this country is compelled as never before to maintain an adequate and positive defense."

6,000 Alligators on View On Island Off Florida

The St. Augustine, Fla., ostrich-alligator farm has for many years been among the outstanding tourist attractions in the South. Located on beautiful Anastasia island, the farm contains the world's largest collection of live alligators numbering more than 6,000, and a large exhibit of live ostriches.

Although young in comparison to the city's famous historical landmarks, it is one of the oldest establishments of its kind on this continent. The collection was started by Felix Fier and George Reddington, several years prior to the beginning of the twentieth century, says the St. Augustine Record. It was shown for some time without charge at old South Beach, near the site of the new fishing pier, when tourists flocked there to enjoy the amusements offered at the pavilion. At that time sightseers were transported to this popular resort in a two-car steam trolley. Running usually at half-hour intervals, the trolleys were nearly always filled to capacity.

As interest grew in the unusual collection, Mr. Fier and Mr. Reddington decided in 1901 to concentrate their efforts on the development of an alligator farm and operated it from that time as a commercial enterprise. The exhibit then included about 40 large 'gators.

In 1921, when the collection had grown to several thousand, and the site at South Beach was found to be inadequate, the farm was moved to its present location on Anastasia island, about two miles away. The collection of marine treasures and other curiosities which formed the nucleus of the present museum was moved also.

Cracked Ice Is Used In Place of Anesthetic

The use of ether, chloroform and other drugs as anesthetics preparatory to operating on lower animals is often objectionable because of the after effects of the drugs. This difficulty can be overcome by the use of low temperatures for stupefaction. Fishes, amphibians and reptiles may be conveniently and fully anesthetized by immersion in water and cracked ice or simply in cracked ice. After 10 or 15 minutes in the cooling mixture the animals are fully stupefied and, if they are laid out on cracked ice, they may be subjected to an extended and uninterrupted operation.

Recovery is quick and satisfactory at the ordinary temperature of the laboratory, and the animals so treated may be almost at once tested in a particular way without waiting for the gradual disappearance from their systems of an anesthetic drug, writes G. H. Parker in "Science." This method has been applied with success in the Harvard laboratories to salt-water and fresh-water fishes, to amphibians and to reptiles. Whether it will have any operative significance for adult, warm-blooded vertebrates remains to be seen. Press reports of a kind of cold hibernation induced in human beings by a slight lowering of their body temperatures is suggestive of such a step.

Flying Fryers

Hawaiian chicken growers are now having live chicks from the Santa Clara (Calif.) valley sent to them by the flying Clippers. Transportation and feeding for each chick is about $1. The chicks are shipped when they are one-day old. The expense, it is said, is little more than it would be to ship eggs that way for hatching. The Clippers have been equipped with heaters in the baggage compartments with a capacity for 700 chicks on each trip.

White Believes Help Was Given

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 27 (AP).—C. White, Governor Bob Jones' secretary, says it is "perfectly obvious" that Winnie Ruth Judd had help in her midnight flight from Arizona State Hospital.

White, directing an investigation into the trunk slayer's escape, said he believed the one-time "tiger woman" had assistance both inside and outside the institution.

Meanwhile, baffled officers conducted a clueless search for the twice condemned murderer. Their theories place Mrs. Judd from within a few blocks of the hospital to as far away as Mexico City.

Sheriff Lon Jordan and a deputy searched the home of Mrs. Judd's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, as a "precautionary measure."

Mrs. McKinnell informed the officers her daughter's Tuesday night escape had further impaired the health of Mr. McKinnell, seriously ill and bed-ridden for months.

The parents said Mrs. Judd came to their home shortly after her escape and they attempted to persuade her to return to the hospital. In a letter to Governor Jones, the murderer contended she was persecuted by the hospital administration.

Mrs. Judd was convicted in 1932 of the trunk slaying of Agnes Ann Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson, nurses with whom she shared an apartment.
